

How will this therapy help me?

Description

What is bioresonance?

Bioresonance therapy is a holistic treatment method that aims to target the root cause of health problems, rather than simply suppressing a person's symptoms. This helps to improve general health and supports the body as it works to repair itself.

How does this therapy work?

Treatments are given through a BICOM® bioresonance machine. This uses electromagnetic frequency to target harmful substances in the body and promote healing. The science behind this therapy is explained in more detail on our How it works page.

What is bioresonance used for?

As a versatile therapy, bioresonance can be used to help treat a variety of conditions. One area it has been found to be particularly effective is the treatment of allergies. It can also be used alongside conventional medicine to help alleviate side effects and achieve a better outcome.

What happens at an appointment?

A therapist carries out testing and treatment using a BICOM® machine. At an initial session, bioenergetic testing is used to evaluate a patient's health and determine which particular treatments will be most suitable. The course of treatment is then started within the same session. Follow up appointments can then be used as needed to benefit fully from the therapy. It is possible to book either an in-person or a remote appointment.

Date Created

2021/04/16

Author

davidfranklin