

© Annalise Braakensiek
Jumping for joy again: Australian model, Annalise Braakensiek, has opened up about her ongoing health problems, and chronic fatigue, which she cured via the alternative method - Bicom therapy

Overcoming Chronic Fatigue Through Bioresonance

Description

The Australian model Annalise Braakensiek had been struggling with fatigue for three years despite doing her best to look after her health. After having suffered from Dengue Fever at age 40, she had never seemed to have returned to her former self.

Fortunately, Annalise turned to BICOM® therapy in Sydney and as a result, her health drastically improved. Without being aware of it, Ms Braakensiek had been the owner of “an abundance of heavy diseases and viruses” which had all been contributing to her chronic fatigue. In addition to Dengue Fever, she discovered that she had previously had Ross River Fever and Glandular Fever. She states: “After six months of treatment I feel much more like my old pre-Dengue self...not looking eight months pregnant after unknowingly ingesting wheat”.

With her health restored the model describes herself as feeling like “jumping with joy” and she even considered becoming a Bioresonance practitioner herself. Annalise has been “blown away by the results” and is convinced that it is BICOM® therapy that has relieved her of the immobilising effects of chronic fatigue.

Read the original article.

Category

1. Articles

Date Created

2018/02/22

Author

davidfranklin